Region, social status, year: North Italian Condottiero c. 1460

Brief description: Homemade Frogmouth great bascinet (14 ga skull, visorslit is perf plated.), Italian-style cuirass; breastplate, plackart, and fauld with tassets. Asymmetrical pauldrons and arm harness. “Clamshell” gauntlets in the Milanese style (historically would be asymmetrical. Mine are not). My quisses are vaguely 15th century “gothicesque” with light fluting and scalloping; (I should have a less embellished pair in the Milanese style). My greaves are only front-facing, and should be fully enclosed for a more accurate representation. I wear a full shirt of maille under my cuirass, and point my arm harness underneath, causing the maille to cover up my rerebraces. I have a maille standard with a trauma plate.

- All armor pictured has been fought in and against for over a year in its current configuration and conforms to the current version of the Lynx Accords.
